

Cause and Effect Relationship

In the context of the Balanced Scorecard, cause and effect relationships refers to the causal relationships among and between strategic objectives across multiple perspectives. For example an organization may choose to train people in relationship management techniques --> in order to maximize the depth and value of strategic relationship --> which customer' value--> which reduces the cost of seeking new partner and donors--> and contributes to the mission.